

Hale Pa‘ahao
Stuck in Irons House
187 Prison Street, Lahaina
Corner of Prison and Waine‘e

On July 11, 1851, “an Act relating to prisons, their government, and discipline” was passed by the Hawaii Legislature and approved by the King. It authorized a new jail for Lahaina which was to be constructed to “keep entirely separate from each other the male and female prisoners, and to have a yard enclosed by fences of sufficient height and strength to prevent escapes and also to prevent all access to, or communication by, persons outside with any persons confined therein.”

This new prison replaced the one inside the coral-block fort on Lahaina’s waterfront which had been built in the early 1830’s.

Venue Details – The Old Lahaina Prison provides a large open lawn, edged by large shade trees and rich with history perfect for weddings and small to large scale theme events.
